Online MASTER'S Degree in ROMANCE LANGUAGES
option SPANISH or FRENCH

The Department of Foreign Languages now offers an online graduate program in French and Spanish, leading to a Master of Arts degree in Romance Languages, with a concentration in Literature, or in Language, Culture and Civilization. Students are required to fulfill 33 hours of course work. All students must demonstrate a reading knowledge of a second Romance language and perform satisfactorily on both a written and oral comprehensive examination.

While a deliberate "option" in French or in Spanish is the more frequent choice for our graduate students, graduate courses taken in the minor language can be credited towards the M.A. in Romance Languages in the major language. For example, as many as two graduate courses taken in French may count towards the credits needed for the Spanish option, and vice versa. Our online offering can be combined with course work taken on campus for a "lower-residency" degree option.

Language/Culture/Civilization concentrators must demonstrate knowledge of three areas of civilization/linguistics and one area of literature. A concentration on literature will require a selection of three literary periods combined with one area in civilization/linguistics. For those writing a thesis, there will also be a thesis defense. The thesis option requires 30 hours of course work and up to six hours of thesis research.

A number of Graduate Assistantships are available to qualified students, on a competitive basis. A maximum of 12 graduate transfer credits may be granted for graduate studies undertaken in another accredited institution of higher learning, at the graduate level.

A more detailed overview of the graduate program, a list of graduate courses, graduate faculty, the graduate student hand-book, and other materials are available on our website where you will also find the email contact of our Graduate Coordinators.
